

is my body too dazzlelicious for you babe

So I've reached the point in my Twilight obsession where I'm trying to convince my sister and brother-in-law they need to see the movie with me--in costume.

The plan: my sister would be Bella, my brother-in-law would be Edward and I WOULD BE THE SPARKLES! But for some reason they're not really into this? I don't know why. All they have to do is dress normally. My costume would be the most complex. I'm thinking glittery pink body suit with mini-disco balls stapled all over it and then maybe the words DO I DAZZLE YOU? written on the front. Brilliant, I know.

And don't you dare steal that idea because if someone else is running around in a glittery pink body suit with mini-disco balls stapled all over it with the words DO I DAZZLE YOU? written on the front, I will hear about it and I swear to you now I WILL STALK YOU WHILE YOU SLEEP.

me: (O_O)

you: (-_-) zzz

Thank you for weathering this all-consuming Twilight obsession with me, bbs. I know it's not been easy. I caught the bug--what can I say? I am only human! And I am so stoked for the movie.

Oh, and speaking of stalking, is this not the freakiest cat you have ever seen:

The first time I saw that, I was torn between laughing and being really freaked out so I ended up doing that high-pitched giggle people do when they're terrified out of their minds. All of my family members think that cat is the cutest and most hilarious cat in the history of catkind, but I'm just like what?! Clearly that cat has a murderous agenda.

In other news, I've been getting comments on the LJ feed (thanks, guys!), but the comment settings are restricted and I'm unable to reply. I just wanted you to know I'm reading 'em and I appreciate you taking the time.

Anyways, I have to go work on my Twilight Movie Costume now. That glittery pink body suit isn't going to let out itself!

I know!

You thought I was joking about that!